this practice transfer is generally referred to as a "mock cycle," during which the uterus is stimulated with hormones to test the response.